Caribbean Parenting Website SocaMom.com wins Best Parenting Blog and Best New Blog in the Black Weblog Awards 2012

Washington, DC, November 1, 2012 - The Caribbean American Parenting website, SocaMom.com has won the awards for Best Parenting Blog and Best New Blog in the Black Weblog Awards.

"I feel honored to be able to represent Caribbean people as a blogger," says Eva Greene-Wilson, the blogger behind SocaMom.com. "We've been working hard to expand the SocaMom.com's online and offline communities, as well as creating educational content and making it available on the blog for parents. It is encouraging to see our work recognized."

Since 2005, The Black Weblog Awards has recognized nearly 180 blogs in over 30 categories. The Awards, having been featured NPR, CNN, and others, has had winners appear in respected media outlets such as MSNBC, the Huffington Post, and BET. "Many people who are not of Caribbean descent did not know about the unique aspects of Caribbean parenting, until they became readers of SocaMom.com. They are intrigued by the differences, and entertained by the often humorous similarities to their own households," said Eva Greene-Wilson upon learning that SocaMom.com was a finalist. "According to our statistics, I have readers from the Midwest to the Middle East - that shows the power and reach of blogging."

"We knew that the Best New Blog category would be the toughest since it had the most nominees," says Eva's husband and the inspiration for many of her blog posts. "I knew SocaMom.com was special, a phenomenal personal and parenting blog. I saw how much she put into doing amazing things through her blog, on and offline in her first year. She was committed to doing things right, right off the bat, and this award acknowledges that commitment."

Online public voting was held from September 15th to October 1st. Finalists were announced on October 6th. Winners were announced on November 1st.

"I am so excited to see what's next," said Eva Greene Wilson. "Knowing that the readers, fans, and members of our community are excited about what we are doing motivates me to keep working. I truly believe that supporting parents, of all nationalities and races, is one of the keys to making the world better. Our community is growing, and I feel like the future is very bright for SocaMom.com."

SocaMom.com sponsors offline groups for Caribbean parents in Washington, DC and Brooklyn, NY.
